

- The MHS Literacy Center, Media Center and Math Lab
 - Available free to students, the Literacy Center and Math Lab will offer one hour sessions before and after school in February and March to help students better understand the structure of the SAT. These sessions will help students get to know the reading, writing/language and math sections of the SAT. SAT prep books are available for students to borrow; staff can assist students with study groups and supporting materials at any time.

- Online Resources
 - <https://www.khanacademy.org/sat>: Link to your College Board account to receive free personalized test prep resources and feedback!
 - www.collegeboard.org: Find additional SAT resources like six full-length online practice tests and download the SAT Daily Practice app that send you a question each day that you can answer and receive immediate feedback.
 - www.academy.act.org: This site has multiple free ACT practice resources.
 - Try downloading test prep applications to your phone to make studying more accessible. For example College Board's Daily Practice for the SAT will send you daily practice questions that you can answer throughout the day.

- Community Resources
 - Contact your local library. Many, including Fremont Library, are offering test prep services at their locations. Oftentimes these services are free with a library membership. Ask how to use library online databases for test prep and if SAT study programs will be available for students.

ACT and SAT do provide their own test preparation materials. Visit their websites for more information.
